

Establishment of International Nanotechnology Events Service in StatNano

2015-06-26

A new section entitled 'Scientific Events' was set up on StatNano website.

This section enables the visitors to get information about international events on nanotechnology that are held in different countries. Among the options of the new service, mention can be made of searching, filtration by country and date and adding to personal calendar.

StatNano Events Databank is one of the most comprehensive databanks of nanotechnology events, which covers all international events in which nanotechnology-related articles can be presented. It also provides information about the international conferences held in different countries in the specific page of the country.

New features will be added to the service in the near future including adding new events by users and creation of alert for conferences at specific time or determined country.

Visit the new service at <https://statnano.com/events>.